Introducing the New CalPlanner

The name of the California represents a "new" and "fresh" version of our publication called the "Californian," which has been redesigned and rebranded. The "new" edition (revised in 2014) is intended to be more approachable and appealing. The "new" edition features updated content, a refreshed design, and a more modern look. This edition aims to provide the latest news, trends, and developments in the California planning field.

OP-K 1D Beyond the Fence: Planning LA's 21st Century Airport

The most important of LA's airport master plans, the LAX/OP Specific Plan Amendment, Study (OP 1A), along with the new Metro Blue Line, has been designed for the selection of the site for the new passenger terminal. The new airport will be a "Gateway" and a "Gateway" place to represent the future of Los Angeles and the entire region.

OP-K 1Q Change in the Air

On the eve of the groundbreaking ceremony for the new airport terminal, the project was suddenly stalled. The proposed design for the new terminal has been revised, and the construction schedule has been extended. The new design features advanced technology and energy-efficient systems. The project is expected to be completed in 2023.

OP-K 1R HOLLYWOOD PLANNER

Hollywood Planning Advisory Committee

The Hollywood Planning Advisory Committee has been established to provide guidance and oversight for the Hollywood Planning Area. The committee will work closely with the Planning Department to develop policies and regulations that are consistent with the Hollywood Neighborhood Plan.

OP-K 1S Real Planning of Orange County

Real Planning of Orange County

This section focuses on the development and implementation of plans and policies for the Orange County. The Orange County has a comprehensive plan that guides development and growth in the region. This plan is updated regularly to reflect the changing needs of the county.

OP-K 1T Urban Design: Why It Matters

Urban Design: Why It Matters

This section explores the importance of urban design in shaping our communities. It highlights the role of urban design in creating walkable, livable, and sustainable communities. It discusses the benefits of urban design, such as improved public health, increased property values, and enhanced quality of life.

OP-K 1U Urban Design: Nurturing Civic Pride and City-Making

Urban Design: Nurturing Civic Pride and City-Making

This section focuses on the role of urban design in fostering civic pride and community engagement. It highlights the importance of urban design in creating a sense of place and a sense of belonging.

Since Re-Design 2014

This section provides an overview of the changes that have been made to the California since its re-design in 2014. It highlights the improvements made in terms of design, content, and production.
FEATURE: robotic law, PLC, ACP
Sacramento’s Planning Evolution: From the Gold Rush to the Golden 1 Center

While the California “Flower City” and “City of Trees” may be accurate physical descriptions of Sacramento, the city’s early pioneers and successful entrepreneurs used a more creative approach when it came to branding their city. But in the 1850s, Sacramento, at the edge of the California Gold Rush, was anything but idyllic. It was a gold rush town in every sense of the phrase, a city built on the backs of the people who came to mine the precious metal.

The Sacramento region has long been a region of people. The gold rush and the railroads brought thousands of people into the area, and even today, the city remains a bustling metropolis. For some people, it can feel like a city where everyone knows everyone else. This is where Sacramento, our state capital, comes into play. Sacramento is a city where people are constantly on the move, and the city is always changing.

One of the most significant changes in Sacramento has been the development of the Golden 1 Center, a $365 million dollar arena that opened in 2016. The arena is home to the Sacramento Kings, the city’s professional basketball team, and has also hosted a number of concerts and events. The arena is located in the Midtown area of Sacramento, and it has helped to revitalize the area and bring new life to the city.

As the city continues to grow and evolve, the Golden 1 Center is just one example of how Sacramento is always changing and always growing. The city is a living, breathing organism, constantly adapting and changing to meet the needs of its residents. And whether you’re a long-time resident or a new arrival, there’s always something new to discover in Sacramento.
Seventeen decades of APA California

In 1850, the first soil farmers of the Southern California region began to settle in what is now known as the San Fernando Valley. Over the next 170 years, these farmers and their descendants have shaped the region into the vibrant and diverse community we know today. The California Chapter of APA has been a key player in this transformation, advocating for sustainable development and civic engagement.

Next Issue

Feature

What’s Past is Prologue: 70 Years of California Planning

For 70 years, APA California members have shaped our state conferences and events. Now, we celebrate our history and look forward to future developments in California planning.

Conference issue in production.